

Dancer Red And White
 Silkscreen edition 150
 Image 16½" x 22"
 £540 £695

White Linen
 Silkscreen edition 165
 Image 23¾" x 25½"
 £564 £750

The White Veil
 Silkscreen edition 165
 Image 24" x 25½"
 £564 £750

Robert Heindel

1938 - 2005

On July 3 this year, the celebrated illustrator and painter Robert Heindel died at his home in Connecticut. Washington Green feel honoured to have had such a long and happy association with him, and in respect of his great talent, they are proud to release three new limited edition paintings.

Robert Heindel was a gifted artist and his remarkable skills as one of the greatest painters of the ballet was undisputed. His obsession with the ballet started in 1966 when by chance he was given tickets to see Margot Fonteyn and Rudolf Nureyev perform 'Paradise Lost'. His international success was founded on his first major exhibition in London in 1985, titled 'Obsession of Dance', which was attended by Her Royal Highness Princess Margaret. For the next twenty years, as his reputation grew, he captured many leading names in dance including Darcey Bussell, Viviana Durante, Sir Anthony Dowell and Sir Frederick Ashton. His gift was that he succeeded in capturing the flowing movements and spirit of the principal dancers, but also the extraordinary strength and discipline of the backstage rehearsals.

He died aged 66 after a long illness; the man and his extraordinary talent will be sorely missed. ■