

Enamel Cufflinks
Limited Edition of 495
£35

Bring Me Sunshine
Alexander Millar

From Me To Moo
Caroline Shotton

The Good Life
Paul Horton

Elephant Stone
Govinder

MINIATURE WORKS of art

In The City
Paul Kenton

If you want to combine art with an elegant twist, this new limited edition range of cufflinks will satisfy both criteria. Following the release of the last collection, which resulted in a sell-out success, these stunning pieces are likely to prove just as popular, giving you a stylish way to wear your very own work of art.

The first record of cufflinks dates back to the Eighteenth Century when they were invented as a clever way to hold shirt sleeves together as an alternative to ribbon. From that point onwards cufflinks started to play an important part in fashion, and have always reflected the artistic movements of the era, with the Art Deco period of the 30s responsible for some beautiful enamel designs.

During the last five years we've seen another resurgence in popularity, as shirts with a French cuff are back in fashion and cufflinks have once again grown in popularity. We are delighted to offer our latest range of beautiful cufflinks, translating some of our most popular artists work into stunning miniature pieces.

Not only do these pieces provide an opportunity for artists to explore their creativity, but it is also a unique way for art lovers to add to their personal collection. These timeless pieces make perfect gifts for any man or woman who cares about making a style statement, and do not have to be saved for special occasions.

Crafted in enamel, each design is a mini work of art in its own right, and each reflects the individuality of the artist who created the original sell-out painting on which they are based.

www.washingtongreen.co.uk